night Monday, of diabetes. She was buried to-day from the Methodist Church. The deceased was a young girl of bright promise and her loss is keenly felt by her parents and friends.

The Presbyterian entertainment had a fine audience last night, and fully deserved it. Mr. Goetz's recitation of the poem "Gates" was excellently done. There was a vein of pathos, and an expression of "you know how it is yourself" thrown into the description of love-making over the old front gate that went to the hearts of his hearers. Mrs. Weimer was put down on the programme for two songs, which she sang so well that an encore was rapturously demanded after each. In response to the first she gave the exquisite Scotch ballad, "White and I'll come to you, my lad," and to the second her excellent rendering of "Pat. Malloy." Miss Mary Lukus sang the number assigned her very nicely. Her voice was sweet and even, and under good control. Little Miss Hattie Thomas' reading, the recitations by Misses Killinger, the songs, and tableaux were all good and thoroughly enjoyed by the audience.

STAR-BEAMS.

A war-like spectacle—A lot of babies in arms.

A "game" man never quails under misfortune.

Spring is at hand and picnics are coming! me boy, go join a Sunday-school.

It's a big jump from private life to the United States Senate. "On Stanley, on!"

"Eggs-act-ly"—as the hen said when she laid two at once. (Keep your bouquets!)

The best bait for a horse (to the animal's thinking), is the gate leading to the stable.

Some men's minds are like a feather bed; takes a good deal of worry to make it up.

Isn't it an unmistakable sign of Jim when a man tries to put on his hat with a shoe-horn?

While in a fashionable church, if you want to find where the paid singers are, see choir up stairs.

Musical refrain of the Enquirer staff:— "And we'll all drink stone blind, when Johnny comes marching home."

Harry Gilbert's Nursery Exposition was a failure, in no-doubt, but it appears bit. (Now if you can't see the point in the above, call at this office with an anger.)

The usual salutation of the ladies at the late Infante Exposition was not "How do you?" nor "How've you been," nor "La, is that you?" nor "I'm so glad to see you, dear," but it was, "Where's your baby?"

Confirmation tickets this spring will be in the Princess form, of white castles or India muslin, and under the long, white, gauzy veil will be worn a small baby cap, with full ruchings around the face.

BATHING IN FAMOUS WATERS.

The Vale of Gilegal—A Lake in Which One Can Neither Sink nor Swim.

The Jordan is about the color of a new slate—a slate with the greenish-gray cloud still covering its surface. Its waters are opaque, thickened with clay, but delicious in temperature, and very refreshing to a pilgrim's palate. Is it a wonder that the river rushed like a mill race? From its sources to its mouth one hundred and thirty-six miles in a bed, it descends three thousand feet. Its very name "Yarden," in Hebrew signifies descent. It twists and turns until it has trebled the natural course from fountain to sea. It rises in its might and covers the plains, and drives back the floods and herds that feed along its banks. You can not bridge it; often you can not ford it.

We got out of our clothes, and with the fresh air of the morning blowing upon us, we passed into the cleansing flood. There was life in every drop of it. There can be no doubt about it; as a tonic the Jordan is unequalled. While we waded cautiously near the shore, sitting down in the bottom to get as much of the water with as little of the current as possible, we were startled by a crashing of underbrush and a thunder of feet. Out of the bush emerged the Russian pilgrims in the wildest excitement. Each strove to be the first to plunge into the stream. Many of them were already half naked, and they speedily stripped, put on a long white garment—a kind of sarong in which it is their wish to be buried—and having immersed themselves in the Jordan, they took off the shroud, rolled it carefully up, and having placed it in their luggage, returned quite naked to pass a half hour in the river.

Of for the Dead Sea! A rapid run in the fresh morning air, over the parched plains. Much of the way, we followed the Jordan bank and were sheltered somewhat by the foliage that fringes it. All this time, though we could have leaped into the stream with a hop, a skip and a jump, we caught only occasional glimpses of the river as it rushed like a mill race between its steep clay walls, buried out of sight in luxuriant groves of willow. Until we were actually upon the shore of the sea, plunging through pebbles and soft sand, we strained our eyes in vain toward the valley of death, eager to catch a glimpse of its bitter waters. Our trail wound through a dense growth of cane, oleanders, cacti, tamarisks. We trotted over the baked soil in Indian file, thinking of the wild boars, wolves, jackals, and leopards that prowled in the vale of Gilegal—the vale that was of old compared to "the Garden of the Lord." We saw nothing, not even a vulture, though no panorama of the Dead Sea is complete without a shadow of its wings darkening the sky.

Is the sea of the Asphalts, the Lake of Lot—call it by what name you will, for it bears all these—over the Eastern Sea of the oil prophets, stole the withering breath of a furnace. Our horses sweated in the heat. There was no shelter near the shore, for our camp trappings had already gone up into the wilderness. A dip into the gummy and clastic water would have asked now, and in ten minutes we stood upon the sand and blinded with the heat and glare that nearly overcame us before we were safely out of it. The sea near the plain of the Jordan is shallow. Looking toward the south, the eye is lost in the profound mists that envelope it. Six and forty miles of sky blue crystal, thirteen hundred feet in depth, the topmost of which is three hundred feet below the level of the Mediterranean.

Neither fish, shells, nor coral are found here. There are fish bones on the shore, the wrecks of the Jordan. The bitter oil—it is hardly worthy of the name of water—strangles everything to death, and then spits it out into the sun. Six million tons of sweet water fall into the Dead Sea daily; six million tons rise out of it, spiritualized, and float over it.

When we passed into the water we felt the weight of it before we got knee deep. Soon we grew buoyant, and kept our balance with difficulty. It was like trying to swim on corks that won't keep their places. A few steps further and over we went, heels up, and, to our surprise, heads up, likewise. The bath was certainly most refreshing, and the novelty of it not unlike a good-natured practical joke. When least suspicious, over we went on all fours, bobbing like bladders, and finding it extremely difficult to make much headway through the almost solid waters. The Dead Sea does for a change of medicine; it is as bitter as gall; but I would as soon think of swimming in a strong solution of feather beds, as I would of taking a dip in our clothes and struck out for the wilderness, our skin burnt like fire, and we shed flakes of salt in such profusion you might have easily mistaken us for members of the Lot family. [San Francisco Chronicle.]

OHIO LEGISLATURE.

SENATE.

COLUMBUS, March 20.—The session of the Senate was occupied in passing resolutions on the death of Senator Haines and the vote for United States Senator.

HOUSE.

Bills were passed as follows:

House Bill 716—Amending the law relating to assignments in trust, authorizing the appointment of assignees in case of the death of one of the assignees appointed. Passed.

Reducing the school levy in Toledo. A bill to provide for local bills was passed, a ter which the House went into election of United States Senator.

THE STATE CAPITAL.

Special Correspondence of the Star.

COLUMBUS, O., March 19, 1877.

The House was very thinly attended yesterday, so much so that it was considered a hazardous undertaking to let a bill go upon its passage. Nevertheless Mr. Witte's pressed his bill No. 665 to a vote and it passed with one vote to spare, though its success was doubtful for a while, only five of the "Little Legislators" being on hand to vote. It was the bill to provide for the closing of the waters, catch-basins, avenues, streets, alleys, market places, wharves, etc., at Cincinnati, letting out the contract by sealed proposals, to the lowest bidder, under supervision of the Board of Public Works. Mr. Witte made a speech in favor of the bill, saying it was a meritorious and wise measure, demanded by his people, and quite similar in character to the law of last winter providing for the repairing of streets. Formerly it cost Cincinnati $500,000 a year to keep her streets in repair, but last year under the contract system nearly $200,000 were saved to the city, and the proposed change in the cleaning of streets would be largely in the interests of economy.

Meuser, of Crawford (Democrat), interrupted Mr. Witte, saying: "What is the bill? Is it politics in it? We were sold last week on a Cincinnati bill by being told there was no politics in it, when it was nothing but politics. I mean the bill to consolidate the Fire Department in something else."

Witte—The bill is recommended by the Hamilton delegation. There is not a remotest shadow of politics in it.

Meuser—We don't like the voucher—we Democrats don't. If there is any respectable gentleman who will vouch for the bill, then we Democrats will support it. (Laughter.) There are grave suspicions about any bill that my friend says has no politics in it. How long will Cincinnati be pleased with the bill? Three months or six? Who will vouch for it?

Mr. Witte rose at this juncture and said: Although not the author of the bill, I am sure it is a very meritorious and salutary measure. Our people desire its passage in the interests of economy. I beg to assure my doubting Democratic friend from Crawford County that there is no politics in the bill; or if there is any, the Democrats will have the advantage, as it puts power into the hands of the Board of Public Works, a majority of whom are Democrats, I believe. It is a good bill.

Meuser—All right, then, I didn't object to the bill; I only objected to its author, for he is a Republican. I am sure that we Democrats can't trust him.

Witte—That is a good character for any man to have. I'll stand that if you will vote for my bill.

Meuser—Oh, yes! I'll vote for it on Mr. Witte's recommendation. [Laughter.]

Roll, of Washington—I am a good Democrat, and I intend to support the bill. I have a letter from the Board of Public Works saying it is a wise measure. Besides, I don't agree that the member from Crawford (Meuser) has any right to speak for the Democrats on the floor. We generally favor Cincinnati measures because they are right.

Meuser—The gentleman is not in good and regular standing with his party. [Laughter.] However, I shall support this bill.

The passage at arms, all in the best of feeling, made considerable sport, and the bill went through by a tight squeeze, and was sent over to the Senate.

CINCINNATI DAILY MARKET.

CINCINNATI, March 20—2 P. M.

WHEAT.—The market firm to-day, and there is a fair demand. Fancy brands range $1.15 to $1.20 according to quality. Family flour to-day $1.00 to $1.05. Extra is worth $1.05 to $1.10, and sales at the latter figure; superfine $1.05 to $1.10, low grades $1.00 to $1.05. Spring is quoted $1.05 to $1.10 and choice sold at the latter price to-day.
